This is a user-friendly guide for anyone wanting to fish in the rivers and freshwater loughs of the North of Ireland. It provides the visitor and local alike with a comprehensive description of the best waters available to the prospective game angler and the main fish to be found. The dollaghan of Lough Neagh, the sonaghen and gillaroo of Lough Melvin, the salmon and grilse of the Foyle and the mayfly of Erne and Melvin are all described through an angler's eyes. In addition to details of the likely water and weather conditions is a list of the most productive months for different loughs and rivers. The guide presents details on current fishing regulations, permits, permissions and licences required, angling tour operators and how to cook the catch.
