Capital Tennis: A Memoir Allie Ritzenberg

A memoir by the founder and director of the St. Albans Tennis Club in Washington, D.C., who, in the 1960s and 70s, helped establish tennis as the sport of choice of the capital's power elite. Among his students were Jackie Kennedy, Robert McNamara, Katherine Graham, and presidential candidates, senators, and supreme court justices. Ritzenberg became seriously competitive in senior tennis and is now ranked #1 in the world among players 85 and older.
