Sebastian Taylor isn't looking for a mother for his girls, but playing the role of both parents isn't something he ever thought he'd have to do. Unfortunately, his wife left him no choice, disappearing before serving him with divorce papers last year on Christmas Day. He's known Sadira Duncan since she first started teaching at the school. Coaching the cheerleading squad and gymnastics team put her directly in the path of his girls, setting her up become the mother figure they'd lost even before Dedra Taylor had skipped town. Now, Sebastian aches for the beautiful, dark-skinned woman he's tried so hard not to notice. She's everything he's ever wanted in a wife, and his daughters love and respect her. Not only that, but she tempts him more than any woman ever has. But when his ex-wife returns, will his life come crashing down once again? Will his daughters have a second Christmas ruined? Or will they get A Mother for Christmas?
